-Janet Carmichael Complex Manager New Vision Movies 400

Janet was my supervisor at Carmine Cinemas for nearly fifteen years. It was under her direction that I trained new employees on the complexities of the projection equipment. I also undertook my first major writing project when I developed a manual for training employees on the emerging digital projection technology.

-Prof. Tony Grooms Professor of Creative Writing at Kennesaw State University 470-578-6440 tgrooms@kennesaw.edu

Prof. Grooms was the first person to peak my interest in creative writing. It was under his tutelage that I came to the realization that a truly encompassing curriculum for an English class must include instruction in finding new and unique means of expression. He is the reason I continued my education and endeavors in creative writing. Without his influence, I would not have written my two novels or many of my other creations.

-Dr. David King Professor of English Studies at Kennesaw State University

Dr. King is the closest thing to a mentor I have ever had in my life. In my mind he is the template of what a good educator should be. It was under his instruction that I became aware that I belonged in a classroom. Immediately after that moment, I would comb the course catalogue for any opportunity to take a class with him so that I could emulate his style and demeanor.
